Computer Resources

Geotechnical design usually involves analyses of ultimate limit states (e.g. collapse) and serviceability limit states (e.g. deformation). The computer resources of G&P Geotechnics Sdn Bhd include software that can carry out analyses in both states. Finite element program (e.g. Plaxis) is used to analyse complicated foundations, dams, slopes and other soil-structure interaction problems.

Geotechnical Engineers in G&P utilise the latest technology in engineering computing software to produce innovative, cost effective and safe designs that meet our Clients' requirements and comply with the National Codes and normal good practice.

A good understanding of the subsurface conditions is essential for successful geotechnical designs. Diligently planned subsurface investigation and intelligent interpretation of the factual information form a strong foundation for our design works. Therefore in G&P, we have adopted a computerised geotechnical data management system.
